Political and technological revolutions transformed human experience in the first half of the twentieth century, resulting in profound shifts in the form and purpose of visual art. This course investigates artists’ responses and contributions to these transformations, new conceptions of subjectivity and materiality, and the changing relationship between popular and elite cultures. Professor Sarah Hollenberg (hollenb@gmail.com)