REQUIRED COURSE MATERIALS:

TEXTBOOK:

*This book is required and the primary text for this class. 1 ******

Some days may have supplemental readings, which have been made available on this syllabus via embedded links.

COMPUTERS/LAPTOPS ARE REQUIRED, AS QUIZZES AND DISCUSSION POSTS WILL BE MADE DURING CLASS.
ABOUT THIS INTENSIVE SHORT COURSE:

Because this is an intensive, week long course, your ability to be self-motivated and participate will be critical to your ability to be successful in the class.

Accommodation Notice:

The University of Utah seeks to provide equal access to its programs, services, and activities for people with disabilities. If you will need accommodations in this class, reasonable prior notice needs to be given to the Center for Disability Services, 162 Olpin Union Building, (801) 581-5020 (V/TDD). CDS will work with you and the instructor to make arrangements for accommodations.

Note: This syllabus is meant to serve as an outline and guide for our course. Please note that I may modify it with reasonable notice to you. I may also modify the Course Schedule to accommodate the needs of our class. Any change will be announced in class and posted on CANVAS under Announcements.

Teaching & Learning Methods:

Class Participation (10%):

There is a daily “What do you think?” discussion post (or WDYT discussion post) that will be made on CANVAS, during class. Each day of the week, I will post WDYT questions from the text on CANVAS that relates to a section for the day’s reading. My intent with these prompts is to generate critical thought about course material.

When you post a WDYT post on CANVAS, you should try to use class material (if possible), current events (if possible), and inject your personal opinion. A high-quality mandatory posting will be at least two paragraphs in length (but need not necessarily be more than two paragraphs) and will contain a cogent argument which responds directly to the question asked and does not contain spelling or grammatical errors.

Active participation – whether through comments, listening, or note taking – is expected of all students. Civility and respect are essential to class discussions – comments and critiques should be focused on the material, not the person.

Although I hope classroom discussion fosters a healthy and vigorous debate between students, I will request decorum if discussion is unreasonably derogatory towards another student. Otherwise, classroom discussion will be fair game. In short, don’t refrain from engaging each other, but please make every effort to be respectful.

Students must attend all five days of class and arrive on time each day. Failing to attend all five days will result in automatic failure. Upon completion of the course, students who were on time and participated each day will receive a total of ten (10) points.

Daily Quizzes (40%):

There are 4 quizzes that will be administered at the end of each of the first four days of class. Each quiz is open book and will be comprehensive of the day’s readings and lecture and has up to 20 questions (multiple choice and several short answer questions) designed to test students’ understanding of key concepts and definitions for a total of ten (20) possible points per quiz.

Pre & Over the break- Course Work (10%):

There will be two “What do you think?” discussion posts (or WDYT discussion post) that will be made on CANVAS, one due prior to the start of the first day (8 am) of class on January 2nd, and the second due prior to the start of class (8am) on January 10th (over the short break). I will post WDYT questions from the text on CANVAS that relates to a section for the day’s reading. My intent with these prompts is to generate critical thought about course material prior to the first day of class, and during the short break between intensive sessions.

When you post a WDYT post on CANVAS, you should try to use class material (if possible), current events (if possible), and inject your personal opinion. A high-quality mandatory posting will be at least two paragraphs in length (but need not necessarily be more than two paragraphs) and will contain a cogent argument which responds directly to the question asked and does not contain spelling or grammatical errors. Each post with worth a total of 5%, or 5 points, for a combined total of 10% of the overall grade.
Final Exam – Simulation & Written (40%):

The final day of class will involve two components – the first will be a classroom simulation and the second will be a written exam. Both components of the final exam must be taken in order to receive any credit for the final exam. That is to say, failing to engage in both components of the final exam will result in an automatic failure.

Component 1:

The first component of the exam will be an in-class simulation designed to apply course concepts regarding how government functions and stimulate critical thought and reflection. This will take the majority of class time, and willingness to participate fully in this simulation is an absolute requirement for taking this course. More information regarding the in-class simulation will be given in-class on Friday, January 10th.

Component 2:

The second component, a written exam, will be comprehensive, drawing on material from lectures and readings covered over the course of the class. It will be administered at the end of class. The written exam will have up to 35 questions (multiple choice and several short answer questions) designed to test students’ understanding of key concepts and definitions for a total of thirty-five (35) possible points. Many of the multiple-choice questions will be taken from the quizzes taken thus far. The short-answer questions will focus on your ability to apply the principles and concepts that you have learned. You will have two hours to complete the written exam once you start it. The written exam is open book and will include several extra credit questions. This being said, no collaboration is allowed on the written exam component.

THERE IS NO MAKE-UP OPTION FOR CLASS PARTICIPATION, QUIZZES OR THE FINAL EXAM.
Grading Policy (Evaluation Methods & Criteria):

Grading is based on a standard point system, calculating final grades by dividing the number of points earned by the total number of points possible. This course is worth 100 points.

A  93-100%  B+  88-89%  C+  78-79%  D+  68-69%
A- 90-92%  B   83-87%  C   73-77%  D   63-67%
B- 80-82%  C-  70-72%  D-  60-62%
E <60%

The course assignments and their value in terms of the final grade break down are as follows:

- Class Participation: 10%
- Quizzes: 40%
- Final Exam: 50%
